

2009 Annual Report

What is a community foundation?

The LaGrange County Community Foundation (LCCF) has served people of LaGrange County for 19 years. Still, we are often asked, “What does a community foundation do?”

We can write a definition (similar to Purdue’s printed in the adjoining box) and use it in publications and ads. We can include our mission statement—“Our mission is to inspire and sustain generosity, leadership and service in our community”—on everything we print. (We have done both.) Still, we get the question.

There is truth in the old adage, “A picture is worth a thousand words.” We’ve all seen pictures which we remember forever in our minds. But words can also convey a picture when used to tell a meaningful story.

Community Foundation:
“An organization which builds endowments and/or donor advised funds through contributions from multiple donors, often within a geographic region. It supports charitable activities focused primarily on the needs of an identified county, city or state.”

Purdue University

In the midst of one of the most challenging economic times since LCCF was founded, the board and staff have found innovative, creative ways to serve the community we all care about.

We have partnered with community organizations to provide ongoing support for local nonprofits faithfully meeting basic human needs. We have supported young people seeking further education through numerous scholarships and a concentrated focus on the 21st Century

Scholar Program. And we have diligently sought new ways (beyond our ongoing task of providing grant funding) to stand strong with the nonprofit community—especially in feeding the hungry.

In this 2009 Annual Report, we want to give you an accurate idea of what LCCF has been doing over the past twelve months. To create this picture, we will use both photos and words.

The community foundation responds in tough times

One “better way” found in 2009 by people of LaGrange County was working together in unprecedented ways to meet food and clothing needs for neighbors affected by the economic downturn. For some residents waiting in line for food distribution became a regular part of life.

The initial cooperative effort was a partnership of LCCF and United Fund of LaGrange County in seeking grant funding from Indiana Association of United Ways. The community foundation also established the Good Samaritan fund to provide a way to support those already involved in providing food and other necessities. The Olive B. Cole Foundation, Howe Military School, LIFE Youth Pod, Parkview LaGrange Hospital, Mr. & Mrs. Michael Miller, Mrs. Jewell Wolfe, and other donors quickly joined the effort. Shipshewana Retail Merchants got involved, and individual businesses, like Garden Gate Cafe and Shipshewana Fitness Center, participated in fundraising.

LCCF grantmaking funds were used to provide matches for many contributions to the Good Samaritan Fund which then awarded grants to support: Berea Missionary Church, Community Harvest Food Bank, LaGrange County Clothes and Food Basket, LaGrange County Council on Aging, LaGrange Ministerial Society, Lima-Scott Food Pantry and Topeka Ministerial Society. These organizations provided prepared lunches and dinners, bags of groceries and clothing for families facing difficult times. Individuals and groups found new ways of working together during a time when an unusually large number of residents needed assistance.

“Finding the better way”

can sometimes mean doing something that has been done long enough to become a tradition, even when circumstances make the task more difficult than usual.

The scholarship program at LaGrange County Community Foundation is one aspect of our work that most people in the county are very familiar with. Establishing a scholarship honoring a friend or family member is a way many individuals and families facing grief over the loss of a loved one have found comfort.

Involvement in assisting county young people committed to obtaining further education to prepare themselves to make positive contributions in the lives of their neighbors is something many find rewarding.

In 2009 LCCF awarded 34 scholarships to a long list of students. In addition to contributions to build endowments, many generous donors provided funds necessary to enable the scholarships to be awarded in a year when endowment earnings were not as substantial as in most years.

Scholarship workshops prepare students to apply

Sometimes the “better way” does not include eliminating an old way that is working, but, instead, means adding a new focus to increase effectiveness in accomplishing the goal. As we continue to emphasize the LCCF scholarship program, the board and staff have realized that offering scholarship workshops and partnering with county schools in support of the 21st Century Scholars Program can make a significant increase in the number of county students obtaining further education.

For 15 years, since 1995 when the first group of 21st Century Scholars began college, students from low to moderate income families have been able to attend a participating public college or university in Indiana with four years of tuition guaranteed as long as they comply with terms of an agreement signed in middle school.

The community foundation sponsored SAT and scholarship workshops for students attending county high schools as one way to assist them in preparing for further education and in seeking scholarships to help provide funding.

Innovative actions in 2009

LCCF can provide “better ways” that are often not seen and never make the news headlines.

- In late 2008 a field of interest endowment fund, the Shishewana Community Fund, was established. The town donated $11,000 to the fund. In February 2009 $10,000 was granted back to the town to be used to help fund the Shishewana water tower project. This assisted the town in obtaining a Community Focus Fund Grant to finance the project.
- In August of 2009 the LaGrange County Economic Development Corporation was granted its own 501(c)3 status. LCCF helped this organization get established by serving as fiscal agent while it developed by-laws, began functioning, and hired an executive director.
- The Board of Directors of LaGrange County Community Foundation in late 2009 provided a matching grant incentive which enabled existing designated funds to build their endowments. LaGrange County Junior Achievement, Westview Dollars for Scholars, Pretzels, Inc., Westview Dollars for Scholars, LaGrange County United Fund and Brethren Retreat Center all seized this opportunity.
