An athlete in the Row New York City program pulls to the finish.

W E L C O M E

For 80 years, The New York Community Trust has invited charitable New Yorkers to join our community of donors who collectively envision a city and a world that are vital, compassionate, and harmonious. They are realistic optimists, fully aware of the challenges, yet hopeful that their contributions will indeed make a difference.

With more than 1,700 charitable funds, each established by an individual, family, or business, The Trust administers assets of $1.8 billion. We invest the principal and make grants that support an array of programs that benefit our city, including those that meet needs not imagined when the funds were created.

The Trust distributed $118 million in grants in 2003. Each of those grants was investigated by Trust staff and approved by our Distribution Committee, a board composed of 12 distinguished New Yorkers appointed by a variety of civic institutions and our 13 respected trustee banks.

Establishing a fund in The Trust is simple and quick, and we offer a range of services. We have the flexibility to accept a wide variety of assets and we offer a number of vehicles for accomplishing a donor's financial and estate planning objectives. We take care of all government reporting, grant investigations and paperwork, auditing, and accounting. Because of our size, The Trust is able to operate with a modest fee structure, preserving charitable money for charitable activities. And, as a public charity, we offer the maximum tax deduction on contributions allowed by law.

Donors can contribute now and through their wills. We offer two kinds of unrestricted funds: One takes full advantage of the services we offer, ensuring that gifts meet the City's most pressing needs now and in the future. The second allows donors to recommend grants during their lifetimes. Donors also can establish field-of-interest funds; whether the purpose is broad or narrow, the organizations chosen to benefit will be selected for their ability to carry out effective programs. Or, donors can set up field-of-interest funds that they advise.

Donors can also set up funds to benefit a specific charity or charities, with the knowledge that should circumstances change so that it becomes unnecessary, undesirable, impractical, or impossible to continue making grants, our Distribution Committee will make sure that the gift is still used for important charitable purposes.

The Trust's founders left us the model for an institution that harnesses the fuel of hope, money, creativity, and commitment to educate our children, revitalize our neighborhoods, put people to work, nourish the arts, and nurture the fragile bonds of community. In a world made fearful and uncertain by terrorism, and in a city that has experienced its deadly results, some might expect to find much cynicism and despair. Our donors and, through their generosity, the nonprofits we support, are the visible evidence that New York is unbowed.

CHAIRMAN'S MESSAGE

The beginning of 2003 looked none too promising. Our City had very serious fiscal problems, which were in many ways shared by the whole country. Cutbacks and taxes were in the headlines every day. Charities were suffering from shrinking endowments and diminishing contributions, while receiving increasing requests for services, and individuals had lower incomes or, all too often, had lost their jobs.

Where did The Trust fit into this picture? Thanks to good management, the generosity of our donors, and the success of our Investment Committee under the leadership of Distribution Committee member Lulu Wang, The Trust did not suffer financially as much as some institutions. It could not—it never could—right every wrong, respond to every need, but, in a challenging year, it accomplished wonders, relying on its special strengths.

What are these strengths?

First, our unceasing research concerning charities and our ability to network keep us constantly “in training.” We can sprint. We can run marathons. In good times and bad, we are able to respond to emergencies and we also are able to address long-term problems.

Second, we are practical. We know that much can be done to help people in difficult situations, improve health and education, keep the arts flourishing, and preserve the environment, and we know how to initiate and implement programs in all these fields. Our staff is acutely aware of the problems of the City. It cares about those in need, understands the implications of laws and policies, and knows how to form successful partnerships. Our donors can turn to us for good guidance, and those who have created endowed funds can feel sure that we are working effectively to address critical needs.

Finally, we are optimistic. We hope and believe that solutions can be found, that progress can be made. We are a positive force.

It is always a challenge to be a New Yorker. But the stress is matched to some extent by the satisfaction of being able to help our City and our neighbors. The donors, the Distribution Committee, and the staff of The Trust are a remarkable band of public-spirited individuals who are, day by day, program by program, improving the quality of life in New York.

This annual report is about blueprints—for structures, strategies, and success. The blueprint on our cover—permission to reproduce was graciously given to us by Richard S. Hayden, the chief restoration architect who drew it when his firm, Swanke Hayden Connell Architects, was involved in the 1986 restoration of the Statue of Liberty—appealed to us for several reasons, apart from its beauty. It offered us a fresh look at a beloved icon familiar to the world, yet one seen so often it has become a cliché. It reminded us that the Statue, although a symbol of freedom and a gift to our country, stands in New York Harbor and is uniquely identified with our city. And it showed the plan underlying the structure.

Our plan, originally conceived by a banker in 1914, had as its genesis two problems. The first was the “Dead Hand,” those conditions placed on many charitable bequests that, over time, became impossible or unnecessary to fulfill. The second was leaving to bankers, in whose hands these charitable trusts were placed, the task of deciding how to carry out the philanthropic wishes of the donors. The result was the community foundation, a public charity overseen by an independent group of community leaders, that would make grants from these funds to effective nonprofits in their region and have the authority to vary the purpose of a fund should circumstances change.

There now are some 700 community foundations, and in the century since the first was founded, their structures have changed. Many are now corporations, responsible for investing charitable assets as well as distributing them. Some, such as The New York Community Trust, are in both trust and corporate form. In addition to managing charitable funds left by will, they also offer a variety of other options, including donor-advised funds and funds that benefit a particular area of charitable interest. They have become an essential part of individuals’ financial and estate planning, and continue to give donors the assurance that their generosity will always be used to help future generations.

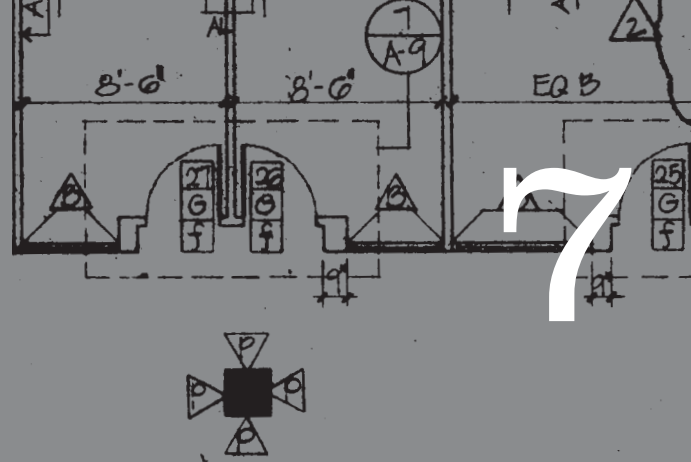

Over the years, community foundations have developed a sophisticated understanding of their regions and become adept at making grants to local nonprofits that can effectively and efficiently tackle problems and contribute to the vitality, health, and stability of their communities. Each of us has adapted the original blueprint so that we can respond to changing times and changing issues. In the following pages, you will learn how one community foundation has used this flexible model to make our city a better place in which to live and keep faith with our donors.

ALL FINE ARCHITECTURAL VALUES ARE HUMAN VALUES, ELSE NOT VALUABLE.

Frank Lloyd Wright (1869–1959), U.S. architect. The Living City, pt. 3, “Recapitulation” (1958).

Like an architect commissioned to design a skyscraper, the founders of The New York Community Trust envisioned a structure that would soar, one that would reflect the magnificence of the city and the dreams of its people. In 1922, two years before The Trust opened its doors, Trust Companies Magazine explained the objectives of community foundations: they must “be vital, basic and far-reaching. To be a vital ... disburser of alms to current charities, while good in itself, is not enough The poor we may have always with us, but not necessarily the poor in spirit, and we must see to it that our charitable acts do more than merely take care of the results of current [problems], and that they do not tend to create the very conditions which they seek to correct.”

The blueprints that were drawn for The Trust—and the values on which they were based—have well served our community of donors and New York City nonprofits for 80 years. But community foundations were also created to respond to the restrictions on charitable bequests that, over time, made them impossible or unnecessary to carry out. The Trust’s first director described that concept in 1924, writing that it “assures the use of the accumulated funds of tomorrow to serve the requirements of that day rather than the perhaps obsolete needs of this day; a conception that adds to the foresight of prophets the hindsight of engineers.”

And so, we have been engineers, our job made easy by the flexible plans we’ve inherited. As The Trust has grown, we have modified the original structure to accommodate our increasingly complex operations. With more donors, and more funds—particularly those set up through wills—giving us broad discretion for distribution, we developed program areas that would help us make coordinated grants to a variety of nonprofits, allowing us to test different solutions to a single problem or a set of inter-related problems.

Within each of these program areas—Children, Youth, and Families; Community Development and the Environment; Education, Arts, and the Humanities; and Health and People with Special Needs—our grants meet one of five purposes: plan or develop new programs; improve services for people; improve agencies’ ability to do their work; make broad systems change through research, policy work, or advocacy; and strengthen neighborhoods. In this annual report, we look at how our grants in 2003 used our blueprints to help respond to today’s problems.

The Brooklyn Bridge Park Coalition organizes events and programs, such as fishing, while the waterfront park is being developed.

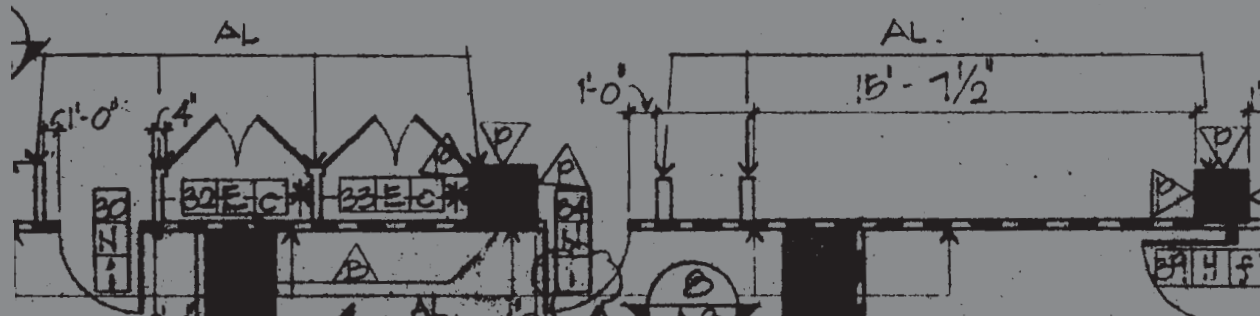

PLANNING AND DEVELOPING PROGRAMS

Foundations have traditionally funded new programs, on the premise that government would pick up the costs once their value was proven. That assumption has not held in recent years, with responsibility for many programs now devolved to the states minus the federal money. And most recently, the recession and slow recovery have taken their toll on state and city will use its grant to increase community support by adding interim programs, walking tours of the piers, and hosting a children's performing arts festival. And other great ideas are percolating—a "Brooklyn Beach," an ice-skating rink, and a kayak launch.

The Medical and Health Research Association of New York City (MHRA) does public health research and budgets and on the endowments of foundations, leaving many nonprofits scrambling for funds simply to keep their projects going. Nonetheless, The Trust continues to look for opportunities to support new programs that make a difference.

A grant to the Brooklyn Bridge Park Coalition in 2003 is one such example. The Coalition was started 15 years ago to push for a waterfront park in the City's most populous borough—and the one with the fewest parks. The City and State have now committed money to the park, but because a number of issues regarding governance and design are outstanding, the park will not be completed for several years. The Coalition helped begin a public planning process involving more than 1,000 park neighbors, and sponsored a number of events in the park, including a September 11th memorial garden on Pier 4 created by more than 500 volunteers, and a summer film series that drew an audience of 4,000. To make sure that progress continues to be made, the Coalition offers medical care to improve the health of high-risk and poor New Yorkers. One of its largest programs is a network of eight centers that provide reproductive health services to more than 23,000 women, most of them minorities and immigrants who rely on public insurance or are uninsured. When a recent survey of its patients showed a high incidence of depression and anxiety, MHRA started investigating. Although they already referred women with serious and obvious mental problems to qualified providers, the centers found that most mental health agencies have long waiting lists, often lack multilingual staff, and are at capacity in serving under- or uninsured patients. Patients with less serious, but nonetheless debilitating, problems went undiagnosed and untreated. With our grant, MHRA will begin planning to add mental health services to all its centers, refining screening tests, training clinical staff, developing administrative, financial, and billing systems, and ultimately applying for licensure by the New York State Department of Health.

IMPROVING SERVICES

New York City has, almost since its beginnings, relied on nonprofits to provide a host of services to residents. Health care, programs for senior citizens and kids, open spaces, and affordable housing are but a few examples. Many of these programs are supported with public money, but often, the contracts do not cover all the costs. Nonprofits, as well as City agencies, must then rely on private contributions to make sure they can continue to offer quality services.

Selfhelp Community Services was started in 1936 to help Europeans fleeing from the Nazis find jobs and adjust to life in the United States. Today, the agency is a major provider of services to the elderly and disabled. It serves nearly 20,000 people each year through its home care programs, senior centers, and four housing programs for the elderly. The agency operates SHARP, Selfhelp Alzheimer's Resource Program, at four sites in Queens, offering supervised social activities, meals, and personal care. To improve the care of its clients at home, Selfhelp used our grant to start a caregiver support group at its Maspeth program, as well as to reach out to additional elders with dementia and educate the community about this devastating disorder.

New Yorkers for Children was created to accept private money for the City's Administration for Children's Services (ACS), the agency responsible for protecting children. We asked ACS to submit a proposal for projects that might improve the City's ability to safeguard children, and where public money was either limited or non-existent, and made grants for three of them. The first will restructure services for adolescents in foster care. Although foster homes are the preferred option for these teens, more than two-thirds are placed in group homes. The agency is recruiting and supporting foster parents and reducing its use of congregate care. The second project focuses on central Harlem, which has the highest number of children in foster care in the City. A Community Support Team is bringing together nonprofits, City agencies, and residents to assess families' needs, make referrals for services, and monitor progress. Finally,

ACS is improving documentation so that it can draw down additional federal money.

STRENGTHENING ORGANIZATIONS

In addition to tight budgets, nonprofits labor under many constraints. Agencies that are involved in policy, advocacy, and direct services are focused on their missions and staff are generally hired for their expertise in a particular program area. Although many have worked to improve administration and financial operations—a necessity in recent years with reduced funding and delays in government contracts—much more needs to be done to streamline management to enhance their stability and improve services.

Legal Services for New York City (LSNY), the largest civil legal program in the country, has a central office and 17 neighborhood offices that help more than 20,000 poor New Yorkers each year. Each office had been running autonomously, with little leadership from the central office. To improve coordination among the programs, and ensure that each delivers quality services, LSNY began a restructuring process that has resulted in a more centralized organization. The agency has a new executive director, who has created a management team and recruited new board members, but needed help to make sure that he and the team have the skills to lead a drastically restructured agency and handle their increased authority. A Trust grant paid for a consulting firm, which coached the director, organized a team retreat and a workshop on the revamped structure for people in the central and field offices, and put in place a performance measurement system.

The purpose of the nonprofit Primary Care Development Corporation is to help build primary health care centers in poor City neighborhoods. During its 10-year history, the Corporation has used $100 million in public financing to renovate or construct 31 facilities with the capacity to serve 300,000 people. It has also worked with the centers to improve their operations. With our grant, the Corporation is offering two programs to twelve additional centers. The first is helping the centers to re-engineer patient flow to reduce waiting time and make more efficient use of clinical staff. The second will help them improve their billing systems to increase revenue and improve cash flow. The ultimate goal is to provide quality health care to residents of poor neighborhoods.

RESEARCH, PLANNING, AND ADVOCACY

A distinguishing feature of The Trust's grantmaking is our commitment to stay with issues over time. The frustration and even anger that we feel when the schools continue to fail our children and too many families are still without permanent homes are offset by two factors. Although some of our grants fail to produce anticipated results, most often someone in need benefits—and that is never a small thing. And because there are many effective nonprofits working toward broad, systemic change, we are able to fund projects that can improve the lives of many people.

For more than a decade, we supported the Campaign for Fiscal Equity's (CFE) lawsuit against the State, which sought to reform the financing system that deprives New York City students of the resources needed for a sound, basic education. In June 2003, the Court of Appeals, New York's highest court, issued a landmark ruling in favor of the plaintiffs. Chief Judge Judith Kaye ordered that by July 30, 2004, the State must determine the cost of providing a sound basic education, ensure that every school in the City has the resources to provide that education, and create an accountability system to measure the results. The case was sent back to the trial court for any follow-up that may be necessary. CFE is working to make sure that their legal victory translates into real improvements for children. The Campaign has joined with groups across the State to convene national experts to make a cost determination, and organized a task force to develop a reformed system for distributing operating and capital funds to school districts and establishing accountability mechanisms. Our grant helps to pay the continuing expenses for the litigation, including presenting these recommendations to the trial court.

Since 1961, the Vera Institute of Justice has been working on solutions to the problems of urban government. Vera was asked by the Department of Homeless Services, the Department of Housing Preservation and Development, and the New York City Housing Authority to help them stem the flood of homeless families, whose numbers have doubled since 1997. Under the direction of the commissioners, and with the help of a Trust grant, Vera is analyzing the agencies' data to identify the conditions and events that drive families to shelters, surveying a sample of families, and looking at promising prevention programs in other states.

While long-term solutions to this complex problem will take time, the research will help the City to predict and monitor homelessness and lead to better prevention programs.

BUILDING COMMUNITY

New York has always been a city of neighborhoods.

Astounding in their variety—of architecture, culture, cuisine, and people—they break down Gotham's size and anonymity. Because of their importance to the City's stability and vigor, strengthening communities has long been a Trust priority.

We have come a long way since the housing crisis of the 70s, when waves of landlords abandoned buildings in poor neighborhoods. Huge efforts by the City, scores of nonprofit housing developers, and thousands of tenants reclaimed many neighborhoods, but a handful still has many City-owned buildings. The New York ACORN Housing Company is working in two adjacent Brooklyn neighborhoods, Brownsville and Bushwick, which have significant numbers of small, abandoned buildings with two or three units, too small to attract private developers. The agency, along with a local contractor, is developing 35 small family houses through the City's Home Works program, which then sells them via lottery to buyers who live in one unit and rent out the rest. With our grant, ACORN Housing is working to prepare low-income families for homeownership, using special mortgage products, grants, and training in budgeting and maintenance—and turning vacant eyesores into homes.

Media coverage of New York's neighborhoods is generally limited to dramatic and sensational events. Residents are shortchanged when it comes to informed coverage of schools, community boards, and other civic issues. The Mosholu Preservation Corporation in the Bronx began publishing a monthly newsletter in one of its neighborhoods in 1988. The Norwood News now publishes 25 times a year and has a circulation of 13,500 in three northwest Bronx neighborhoods. A Close-Knit Community Mourns Murdered Teen

A MURDER MORN
 The close-knit, tight-knit Norwood community mourns the death of a young man, 17, who was shot and killed last week. The victim, a young man, was a member of the local community and was well-known to many of the residents. The community is holding a memorial service for him on Saturday, Nov. 15, at the local church. The service will be held at 7:00 p.m. and will feature a eulogy by the pastor and a performance by the local band. The community is also holding a vigil for him on Sunday, Nov. 16, at 10:00 a.m. at the local church. The vigil will be held in front of the church and will feature a prayer service and a performance by the local band. included getting a court-appointed administrator to manage a building whose landlord had been accused of serious code violations, and the assignment of a senior staff person by the Human Resources Administration to help the 19,000 eligible residents not receiving food stamps to enroll in the program. With our grant, Norwood News will continue to keep its readers informed and engaged in their community.

A BLUEPRINT FOR THE FUTURE

Most of us have learned to take forecasting—be it of the weather, the economy, or the World Series prospects of the Yankees—with large doses of salt. Our world has become too complex, too interdependent, too fast moving, and too uncertain to predict what will happen in the next week, much less over the years. But with our endowment, the help of current and future donors, and a structure that has proven its adaptability, The New York Community Trust expects to be there, contributing its human and financial resources to the needs of the day.

SELECTED GRANTS

For descriptions of all The Trust's discretionary grantmaking during the year, we encourage you to request copies of our six newsletters in 2003.

HOW TO APPLY FOR A GRANT

The Trust makes grants in four general areas: Children, Youth, and Families; Community Development and the Environment; Education, Arts, and the Humanities; and Health and People with Special Needs. We are committed to sticking with significant issues that may not lend themselves to quick or easy solutions, while remaining open to projects that tackle emerging problems and to organizations that may be new to us.

Grants are made primarily to nonprofit organizations located in the five boroughs of New York City. Our suburban divisions handle grants on Long Island and in Westchester (page 34). Grants for programs outside our area generally are from funds designated for specific charities or that have been made at the suggestion of donors.

Applicants should begin by requesting “Guidelines for Grant Applicants” and one or more of the four brochures that describe in detail each of our general grantmaking areas. We also suggest that you request copies of our bimonthly grants newsletter to get a sense of the kinds of projects we currently fund. Please call our receptionist at (212) 686-0010, ext. 0, or visit our Web site, www.nycommunitytrust.org.

If, after you have read our guidelines, you believe that one of your proposed projects meets our criteria, send us a cover letter along with a completed application form (enclosed with the guidelines), and a copy of the proposal—not more than 10 pages plus appendices. Include in your letter a brief summary of the proposal, the amount requested, and the results expected. We do not accept proposals sent by fax or e-mail.

Please note that we do not make grants to individuals and rarely for endowments, building campaigns, deficit financing, films, general operating support, or religious purposes.

We have no specific submission deadlines. Our Distribution Committee meets six times annually, and grant applications are accepted throughout the year.

We will let you know within two weeks that we have received your material. During the review process, Trust program staff will analyze your proposal, determine if and how it fits into our grantmaking program, and check to see if there is adequate money available in an appropriate fund. We will get in touch with you if we have further questions or need more information.

The Trust welcomes your application, but because we cannot possibly fund every proposal submitted to us, we urge you to send yours to several other funders as well.

Paul N. Turner 1869-1950

After working as a railroad telegrapher to finance his degree at Upper Iowa College, Paul Turner arrived in New York with 25 cents and a bunch of bananas.

Determined to become a lawyer, he enrolled at New York University Law School. To support himself, he worked as a cook and bartender at after-theater parties, jobs found for him by a well known actress who was his cousin. He met—and was fascinated by—scores of struggling young actors. When Paul eventually established a law practice, they came to him for help. He joined both The Players and The Lambs, the two most distinguished social clubs for actors. Concerned and understanding the needs of actors, he became convinced that they needed to organize and negotiate for a standard contract. In 1913, he helped found the Actors' Equity Association, and served as its counsel for 37 years, representing actors and helping keep the theater alive and healthy. Paul's early financial struggles had set a pattern of frugality, but in his will he set up a generous fund to benefit "individuals in the theatrical professions." A 2003 grant from this fund to the Actors' Fund of America is helping uninsured workers in the entertainment field get health insurance and improve their access to health care.

The New York Community Trust offers donors with every kind of philanthropic interest an easy and flexible way to accomplish their charitable objectives and receive the maximum tax deduction allowed by law on contributions.

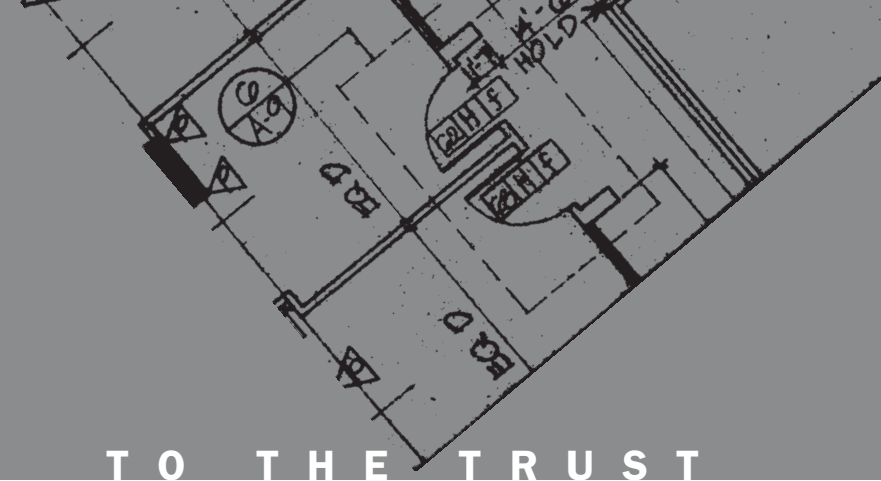

TYPES OF FUNDS

An unrestricted fund is a good option for donors who want to be assured that their gift will always be used to meet vital needs and improve the quality of life in New York City. Our staff is expert in identifying community needs and the nonprofits best equipped to meet them.

A donor-advised fund is an unrestricted fund legally, but the donor recommends the organizations to receive grants. Although we cannot, by law, be bound by these recommendations, we take them very seriously and approve grants to recommended nonprofits that meet charitable standards for programmatic and financial soundness.

In a field-of-interest fund, charitable giving is focused on issues of concern to the donor, such as child and family welfare, youth, education, human justice, conservation, or health policy. The Trust makes grants that meet current needs in the chosen fields. Field-of-interest funds can also be advised by the donor.

A designated fund is for donors who want to support specific organizations but recognize that the world may change. They establish a designated fund in The Trust rather than leave it directly to the charity to assure that their gift remains relevant over time and responsive to changing circumstances. (See page 23 for an explanation of the variance power.)

TO THE TRUST

SETTING UP THE FUND

Each donor establishes a separate account with us—called a fund—with a minimum of $5,000. Donors first decide what they want to accomplish with their philanthropy; our staff is happy to help clarify and refine goals. They then choose the name of the fund, typically using their own names or the names of individuals to be honored or memorialized. Donors who prefer anonymity can choose a general name.

There are at least three ways of giving to a fund with us.

Giving Now: You can set up a fund to support charities during your lifetime and endow them to continue your philanthropy for future generations. Many of our donors regularly add money to the funds they have established.

Deferred Giving: Donors can set up funds through deferred-giving arrangements. A key feature of many estate plans is a tax advantage to you now for the commitment of a charitable gift later. Charitable Remainder Trusts, Charitable Lead Trusts, and gifts of life insurance or retirement plan assets can all be used.

Wills: After providing for personal bequests, you may include provisions for setting up a fund with us or adding to one you already have here. You will save estate taxes and ensure that the charitable work you care about will be continued.

TYPES OF ASSETS

Funds may be established with the following: cash, securities traded on major exchanges, closely held stock, mutual fund shares, retirement plan assets, real estate, interests in limited partnerships, and literature copyrights.

Samuel Prentiss Bailey 1890-1959

Sam Bailey's childhood dream was to become a farmer, but his first jobs after college were in journalism and advertising. When America entered World War I, he tried to enlist, but failed the physical.

On his own, he went to France, joined the French Army as an ambulance driver, transferred to the U.S. forces, became a hero to his French comrades, and was awarded both the French and the Belgian Croix de Guerre. After he was discharged, Sam joined the Paris branch of an American trust company, where he rose steadily from cashier to vice president. When the Germans occupied France in 1940, Sam and his French wife escaped to New York. He took a leave from the bank and moved to Washington, where he directed the Foreign Funds Control program for the Treasury Department. It was then that his desire to be a farmer returned. After the war, he and Denise bought a ranch in New Mexico, where he supervised the operation of thousands of acres and hundreds of cattle. Grateful for the many successes and good things that came his way, he established the S. Prentiss Bailey Fund. The Dance Theater Workshop used its 2003 grant from this fund to help contemporary dance groups increase their performance opportunities and bolster their management services.

Laura Spelman Rockefeller 1839-1915

When Laura Spelman, assistant principal of the Hudson Street School in Cleveland, married John D. Rockefeller in 1864, she began a life that centered around her home, her family, and her church. Her four children were expected to work—at one time pulling weeds from the lawn at a rate of a penny for ten weeds. When oil was discovered in western Pennsylvania, John decided to go into the oil refining business. As the business grew, he moved his family from Cleveland to New York. During the 1880s, the Rockefellers traveled widely. Wherever they went, they always managed to find a little church where they attended services. Laura also became an adoring grandmother of 15 grandchildren. In the early 1900s, as Laura's health began to fail, she was forced to spend most of her days in bed. In September 1914, as John and Laura celebrated their golden anniversary at their home in Pocantico Hills, he said, "I have had but one sweetheart." She died the following spring. Her son, John, Jr., established a fund in The Trust in her memory to help the poor. A 2003 grant from this fund to Queens College of CUNY's Women and Work Program is helping expand a job training and placement program for poor young women.

We are glad to discuss proposed contributions with you. We may not be able to accept some assets that cannot readily be converted to the financial benefit of charity or that carry unusual potential liability.

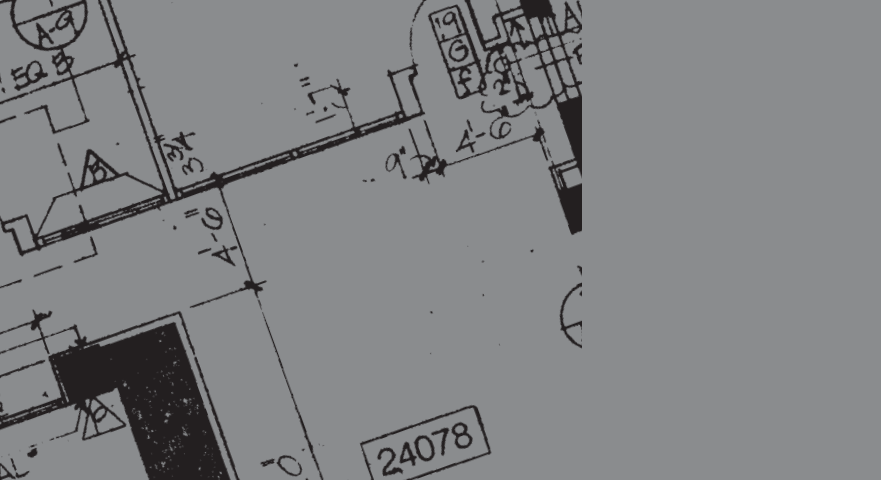

FUND ADMINISTRATION AND FEES

A fund established with our organization may be held in trust with one of our 13 trustees (see page 38), or it may be held by Community Funds, Inc., our not-for-profit corporation. Both operate as The New York Community Trust with a single governing body. If a fund is set up in trust, the bank handles the investments and The Trust manages the distribution. If it is set up in Community Funds, our distinguished Investment Committee oversees the performance of our outside portfolio managers. The determining factor is the inclination of the donor. The service we provide is the same.

Funds that are held in trust are also charged a trustee's fee set by the bank. It can be negotiated at the inception of the fund and varies from bank to bank.

The administrative fee charged to our funds is remarkably low: 2.5 percent of grants paid or 3/10th of 1 percent (30 basis points) of assets, whichever is greater.

The Internal Revenue Service has classified The New York Community Trust and its affiliate, Community Funds, Inc., as "tax exempt" under Section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code; as a "publicly supported" organization under Section 170b(1)(A)(vi); and as "not a private foundation" under Section 509(a)(1). This status ensures donors the maximum tax benefit allowed by law. The Long Island Community Foundation and the Westchester Community Foundation (described on page 34) are divisions of Community Funds, Inc.

A FUND IN THE TRUST OR A PRIVATE FOUNDATION?

A fund in The Trust provides a very attractive alternative to establishing a private foundation. We are a public charity with the attendant tax advantages. A full-time professional staff takes care of all the administrative and grantmaking activities, eliminating the need to set up a separate institution, formulate policies, file innumerable forms, and monitor the status of grant recipients. Establishing a private foundation can take months and be costly; with The Trust, the legal apparatus is already in place, and creating a fund can take less than a day.

We also offer substantial advantages over most commercial donor-advised funds: lower fees, smaller minimums, the capacity to accept unusual gifts, and an in-depth knowledge of the nonprofit community. Because our business is philanthropy, we can help make sure that your money makes a difference.

With her heart and mind always open, Barbara Scott Preiskel savored every minute of her life. She loved her years at Wellesley College, and became the second black woman to graduate from Yale Law School where she met her future husband, Robert Preiskel. Her career began with a clerkship for a prestigious judge in Boston, followed by work with a major law firm. After her two sons were born, Barbara joined the Motion Picture Association of America where she spent 24 trailblazing years, ultimately becoming senior vice president and general counsel. She then began serving on dozens of corporate boards, but her true love was her involvement in charitable, educational, cultural, and civic organizations, where she pursued social justice and helped eradicate racial and gender barriers. In 1978, she joined the Distribution Committee of The New York Community Trust and served as its chairman from 1990 to 1995. When she was diagnosed with leukemia and had to be hospitalized, she greeted visitors with humor, courage, optimism, and a tenacity for life that was awesome. After she died on June 4, 2002, the Barbara S. Preiskel Memorial Fund was set up to continue support for the many issues that concerned her. A 2003 grant from this fund is helping Brooklyn Legal Services Corporation B provide legal help to low-income victims of domestic violence.

GUIDELINES FOR ATTORNEYS

Establishing a fund in The New York Community Trust for your client is a relatively straightforward process. Our comprehensive booklet, “Creating a Fund Here: Suggested Words and Procedures,” provides all the relevant details: The Trust’s tax classification letter, descriptive material on the different types of funds, and suggested language to help you draft instruments to provide for gifts to our organization. Call us to receive a copy.

THREE IMPORTANT FACTS

First, we are unable to accept a fund unless its terms have been reviewed by us and found acceptable. It is particularly helpful if we review the language before the instrument is executed to ensure that we can meet the donor’s purpose. Second, a co-trustee is not permitted under the Resolution and Declaration of Trust Creating “The New York Community Trust.” Third, all our funds enjoy an important advantage: If a change of circumstances makes literal compliance with the terms of the gift instrument “unnecessary, undesirable, impractical, or impossible,” our governing body is able to vary them. Donors are assured that their gifts will never become obsolete; they will remain useful to the community in perpetuity. Donors have the option of setting up funds in The New York Community Trust with a bank as trustee or in our not-for-profit corporate affiliate, Community Funds, Inc. The organizations share a governing board and file a single tax return with the IRS.

CREATING A FUND IN THE NEW YORK COMMUNITY TRUST

The Resolution and Declaration of Trust Creating “The New York Community Trust” (the “R & D”) is a complete trust instrument. It sets out in detail the powers and duties of the Trustee Bank and the Distribution Committee. In order to establish a fund in The New York Community Trust, the founding document—whether for a bequest or a gift during lifetime—must incorporate the R & D by reference.

An advantage of The New York Community Trust is that it is not a private foundation subject to certain requirements, and the separate funds that constitute The New York Community Trust are component funds of a public charity, not private foundations. It is important, therefore, that an instrument designed to create a new component fund in The New York Community Trust adhere strictly to the provisions of the R & D; please call us for a copy.

CREATING A FUND IN COMMUNITY FUNDS, INC.

Community Funds, Inc. is a New York State not-for-profit corporation. As with a fund in The New York Community Trust, a fund established in Community Funds becomes part of a publicly supported organization, and is not regarded as a private foundation. The fund is held and administered pursuant to the provisions of the Not-for-Profit Corporation Law. Please call us for a copy of the Certificate of Incorporation and By-Laws of Community Funds, Inc.

CREATING A FUND IN OUR LONG ISLAND OR WESTCHESTER DIVISION

Because the Long Island Community Foundation and the Westchester Community Foundation are divisions of Community Funds, donors have the same options described above.

NOTES TO COMBINED FINANCIAL STATEMENTS

The New York Community Trust and Community Funds, Inc. (including its Long Island and Westchester Divisions)

December 31, 2003 and 2002

(1) Organization

The New York Community Trust and Community Funds, Inc. (including its Long Island and Westchester Divisions) are community foundations created to build permanent charitable endowments for the areas they serve. The Trust, as the combined foundations are hereinafter referred to, is tax-exempt under Section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code (the Code) and has been determined not to be a private foundation under Section 509(a)(1) of the Code. The Trust administers more than 1,700 individual charitable funds, each established with an instrument of gift describing either the general or specific purposes for which grants are to be made, usually from income only, but in some cases from principal.

(2) Summary of Significant Accounting Policies

Accounting standards provide that if the governing body of an organization has the ability to remove a donor restriction, the contributions should be classified as unrestricted net assets. However, under New York State law and The Trust's governing instruments, the assets are held as endowment funds until such time (if ever) as the governing body deems it prudent and appropriate to expend some part of the principal or appreciation. Accordingly, the combined financial statements classify all net assets as unrestricted, except for those net assets restricted for the September 11th Fund (see note 6), but segregate the portion that is held as endowment from the funds that are currently available for grants and administration.

Cash equivalents represent short-term investments with original maturities of ninety days or less, except for those short-term investments managed as part of long-term investment strategies.

Investments are carried at fair value. The fair value of investments in common trust funds is based upon the fair value provided by the trust managers. Limited partnership interests are reported at fair value as determined by the general partner of each limited partnership. The carrying amount of all other financial instruments approximates fair value.

Fixed assets are recorded at cost and are depreciated on a straight-line basis over the estimated life of the respective asset. Leasehold improvements are amortized over the life of the respective improvement or the remaining term of the lease, whichever is shorter. Fixed assets are reported net of accumulated depreciation of $2,029,518 in 2003 and $1,792,946 in 2002.

Investment expenses include fees for bank trustees, investment managers, and custodians.

Grants and services to beneficiaries are expensed upon approval of the Distribution Committee of The New York Community Trust or the Board of Directors of Community Funds, Inc.

Accounting estimates are an integral part of the combined financial statements prepared by management and are based upon management's current judgments. Actual results could differ from those estimates.

Certain 2002 amounts have been reclassified to conform to the 2003 presentation.

(3) Investments

(4) Pension and Postretirement Medical Benefit Plans

The Trust administers a noncontributory defined benefit pension plan covering substantially all employees. Benefits are based on years of service and the employee's compensation during the five highest consecutive years during the last ten years of employment. The Trust also provides medical insurance benefits for its eligible retired employees.

The following sets forth financial information about the plans as of December 31, 2003 and 2002:

	Pension benefits		Other benefits
	2003	2002	2003	2002
Benefit obligation at December 31	$ 9,434,838	7,271,340	1,055,197	873,716
Fair value of plan assets at December 31	10,875,500	7,595,680	—	—
Funded status	$ 1,440,662	324,340	(1,055,197)	(873,716)
Prepaid (accrued) benefit costs recognized in the combined balance sheets	$ 1,563,007	1,910,748	(1,031,557)	(994,240)
Benefit costs	$ (347,741)	(197,730)	84,865	59,929
Benefits paid	$ 297,876	253,390	47,548	30,223

The weighted average discount rate for the pension and other benefits plans for December 31, 2003 and 2002 are 6.0% and 6.5%, respectively. The weighted average expected return on plan assets and rate of compensation increase for the calculation of the pension benefits are 8.0% and 5.0% respectively as of December 31, 2003 and 2002. The health care trend rate assumption for 2003 was 8.5%, declining each year to 5% in 2010.

The Trust also sponsors a defined contribution retirement plan for employees, in which contributions are based upon a specified percentage of salaries. Retirement plan expense was $393,300 and $357,412 in 2003 and 2002, respectively.

(5) Commitments

The Trust leases office space in New York under a lease expiring on December 31, 2004, which requires future minimum rental payments of $954,940. In addition, on March 30, 2004, The Trust entered into a lease agreement for office space expiring March 31, 2020. Future minimum rental payments for the new lease are as follows:

2004	$	—
2005		879,424
2006		1,172,566
2007		1,172,566
2008		1,172,566
Thereafter		15,505,643
Total:	$	19,902,765

Rent expense for the years ended December 31, 2003 and 2002, net of sublease income of $88,000 in 2003 and $84,000 in 2002, amounted to $976,000 and $965,000, respectively.

(6) September 11th Fund

The Trust and United Way of New York City (United Way) established the September 11th Fund (the Fund) to help respond to the events of September 11, 2001. To assure that monies from the Fund were spent effectively, without undue delays, and in a manner that ensured accountability, they appointed a governing committee (the September 11th Fund Board) and retained a chief executive. The Trust and United Way authorized the Fund to establish grant guidelines and determine distributions from the Fund.

Both The Trust and United Way accepted contributions for the Fund. As of December 31, 2003, more than $520 million (unaudited) had been contributed and grants of more than $470 million (unaudited) had been made from the Fund. The accompanying financial statements only show the amounts received by The Trust. The remaining contributions were received by and the grants were made by United Way, which acted as the Fund's dispersing agent through December 31, 2003; the transactions are recorded on United Way's financial statements. The financial statement of the Fund was audited for the year ended July 31, 2003.

At its December 6, 2001 meeting, the September 11th Fund Board authorized the Cash Assistance Program for victims. Because United Way's charter does not permit it to make grants to individuals, it could not act as disbursing agent and so made transfers of $55 million and $75 million in 2002 and 2001, respectively, from the September 11th Fund to The Trust to administer this program. As of July 18, 2002, those transferred amounts had been granted to individuals.

INDEPENDENT
AUDITORS' REPORT

Distribution Committee of The New York Community Trust and Board of Directors of Community Funds, Inc.:

We have audited the accompanying combined balance sheets of The New York Community Trust and Community Funds, Inc. (including its Long Island and Westchester Divisions) as of December 31, 2003 and 2002 and the related combined statements of activities and cash flows for the years then ended. These combined financial statements are the responsibility of the Organizations' management. Our responsibility is to express an opinion on these combined financial statements based on our audits.

We conducted our audits in accordance with auditing standards generally accepted in the United States of America. Those standards require that we plan and perform the audit to obtain reasonable assurance about whether the financial statements are free of material misstatement. An audit includes examining, on a test basis, evidence supporting the amounts and disclosures in the financial statements. An audit also includes assessing the accounting principles used and significant estimates made by management, as well as evaluating the overall financial statement presentation. We believe that our audits provide a reasonable basis for our opinion.

In our opinion, the combined financial statements referred to above present fairly, in all material respects, the financial position of The New York Community Trust and Community Funds, Inc. (including its Long Island and Westchester Divisions) as of December 31, 2003 and 2002, and the changes in their net assets and their cash flows for the year then ended in conformity with accounting principles generally accepted in the United States of America.

The governing body consists of 12 members who serve as the Distribution Committee of The New York Community Trust and as the Board of Directors of Community Funds, Inc. It is their responsibility to oversee our organization's operations and grantmaking.

Six members are nominated by civic authorities representing the public: one by the Mayor of the City of New York; one by the Chief Judge of the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit; one by the Chairman of the New York City Partnership and Chamber of Commerce; one by the Chairman of Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts; one by the President of the Association of the Bar of the City of New York; and one by the President of the New York Academy of Medicine. The Trustees' Committee nominates five members, and the President of The Trust is a member by reason of office.

Members serve without compensation. They are selected for their judgment, integrity, and understanding of philanthropic needs. The Committee meets every two months throughout the year; subcommittees meet on a regular basis.

The Finance Committee monitors the financial operations of The Trust. The Investment Committee (see page 31) establishes asset allocation guidelines, recommends investment advisors and vehicles, and monitors investment performance. The Fund Purposes and Suggestion Review Committee assures that the provisions and intent of each donor's philanthropy are honored, and reviews grants suggested by donors to ensure that they meet our charitable guidelines.

With the belief that grantmaking is most effective when it is done locally, The Trust established divisions that reach out to the greater metropolitan area: the Westchester Community Foundation, founded in 1975, and the Long Island Community Foundation, founded in 1978.

Each is guided by a board of advisors composed of local community leaders and staffed by people expert in grantmaking and donor service. As part of The Trust, Long Island and Westchester enjoy our investment management, legal, financial, and accounting services. For donors who wish to contribute to charities in these communities, our suburban divisions offer the best of all worlds: they combine sensitivity to local concerns with the economies of scale and expertise of a large organization.

Funds in each division are listed on the following two pages.

TRUSTEE BANKS

In 1923, the banks of New York City envisioned the type of philanthropic organization that could best meet the changing needs of this community.

It would be set up to give wealthy people and those of moderate means an equal opportunity to accomplish their philanthropy within a flexible framework. The charitable funds they created would be permanently secure. The organization's governing body—an impartial and changing committee of New York citizens chosen for their understanding of philanthropic needs—would oversee the selection of charitable beneficiaries.

This was the beginning of The New York Community Trust. Thirteen banks and trust companies have adopted the "Resolution and Declaration of Trust Creating The New York Community Trust." The representatives of these financial institutions constitute the Trustees' Committee, and each bank is authorized to receive funds in trust for The New York Community Trust.
